DAVIS THEATRE.

New Show Today—Three Big Keith Acts and Triangle Feature Photographs.

For the last half of this week an exceptionally fine show has been booked to appear at this theatre. Both vaudeville and photoplays are away ahead of anything ever seen here. The attraction is the Triangle Trio, three young men who present a comedy singing specialty that is full of ginger, and they have a very beautiful and headliner is Queenie Dunedin, the variety girl, who comes here direct from Keith's theatre, Providence, where she is the hit of the show. She has an act that is seldom seen outside of the big cities and is sure to be a big hit with the patrons of the Davis. The third act is Middleton and Spillmeyer, presenting their original offering, An Ocean Woe. This is an act that will please everyone. They are both artists and have something different from anything ever seen here.

The Triangle feature on this bill is called The Pillars of Society, starring Henry Walthall, the star of The Birth of a Nation.

As a piece of reading this play might be hard work for a good many. As a picture play it reveals with extraordinary clearness just what Ibsen was driving at and how essentially simple and direct was the message he sought with his strange and difficult words. Here at last is the real Ibsen, plain to all.

Not many modern stage plays have stood the test of time. The photograph has this one. The screen has punctured large holes in many a dramatic idol, but this powerful story of the fate of man in a modern world, and themselves in their community on its shores in strength and directness as it proceeds. It is not flashy or catchy, but it is tremendously human and it slowly builds to a quick series of terrific climaxes.

Done in what might almost be called the classic tradition of the photograph, it is in every respect the "different" picture, and a most stimulating revelation of the material still untouched by the makers of film chicanery.

To complete the show there is a funny two reel Keystone comedy called Vampire Ambrose and Mack Swain and the picture of the Spillers. Selig's virile masterpiece in nine thrilling acts, which is the feature at the Davis for tonight. The wonderful story is taken from the famous book by Rex Beach and is produced on a magnificent scale, no expense being spared to attain the real atmosphere of the play. In the picture a whole town is blown to atoms, and an extraordinary volcanic earthquake is presented. Today is the last chance to see the exceptionally fine picture, and if you are a lover of the best in motion pictures don't fail to see The Spillers. Matinee at 2:15 and evening at 8:15 and 8:45, with augmented orchestra and special programme at the evening performance.

BREED THEATRE.

Capacity houses at all performances yesterday, and today. William Farnum and Kathryn Williams in The Spillers. Selig's virile masterpiece in nine thrilling acts, which is the feature at the Breed for tonight. The wonderful story is taken from the famous book by Rex Beach and is produced on a magnificent scale, no expense being spared to attain the real atmosphere of the play. In the picture a whole town is blown to atoms, and an extraordinary volcanic earthquake is presented. Today is the last chance to see the exceptionally fine picture, and if you are a lover of the best in motion pictures don't fail to see The Spillers. Matinee at 2:15 and evening at 8:15 and 8:45, with augmented orchestra and special programme at the evening performance.

On Friday and Saturday the Breed will present The Devil at His Elbow, a strong and gripping Metro wonder-play in which Clifford Bruce and Dorothy Green are starred. In this feature Mr. Bruce has the role of a mysterious engineer who has a contract with the government to complete plans for a new type of submarine. He falls, when he indulges in heavy drink, in order to get out his plans on time. Miss Green plays the part of a girl of the street. How both are instrumental in reclaiming the other, and the unusual twist in the finale, makes one of the most dramatic stories of its kind ever shown on the screen. There is a strong supporting cast, which includes Edward Martindel, Mary Sandway, J. K. Roberts, Adolph Menjou, Frank McDonald and others. Burton King directed the production, and the Devil at His Elbow and Harry Revier supervised its direction.

The Wide-Awake Circle

Spain was to discover and take all lands west of it and Portugal to take lands east of that line. In 1492, Christopher Columbus, discovered the Brazilian coast in February, 1500. This discovery would have won for Spain, but as the maritime ports were in the hands of Portugal, and the absolute rights, but no settlement was made until 1532.

Notwithstanding the rights of Portugal, France and Holland tried to gain foothold there. The Portuguese settled Bahia in 1549, which remained the capital of Brazil until 1763. In 1565 the French held Rio de Janeiro, but were driven out by De Soto. Maranhao was settled by the French in 1612 and held it two years. In 1612 and held it two years. In 1612 and held it two years.

Dom Pedro I declared Brazil independent on the 7th of September, 1822. Portugal did not hinder Brazilian independence. Unfortunately for Brazil there were wars and turmoil for the next half century, then prosperity set in. In 1871 over 200,000 slaves were freed; and in 1888 slavery was entirely abolished. In the nineteenth century there were remarkable developments in the country. Cities had sprung up fast, sugar and coffee were exported and mines of gold, diamonds and silver were worked.

In 1808 Dom John fled to Brazil and in a few years his son, Dom Pedro I, took the Brazilian crown and was the monarch. Dom Pedro I declared Brazil independent on the 7th of September, 1822. Portugal did not hinder Brazilian independence.

Settlements were made at Wethersfield, Hartford and New Britain. Settlers from Massachusetts in 1634 and 1635. New Haven was settled in 1637 by a company of Puritans from Connecticut.

King Charles II gave the colonists a charter allowing the people to elect their own governor and representatives. The charter was signed by the king and the colonists. New Haven was now joined to Connecticut.

When James II came to the throne he determined to take away the charters of Connecticut and Rhode Island as his brother, Charles II had done in the case of Massachusetts. His object was to bring them directly under his despotic control. Sir Edmund Andros was made governor of New England, and demanded the surrender of the Connecticut charter. In 1687 Andros was driven out of the colony by the people. The Connecticut people looked upon that document as the title-deed of their liberties, and were resolved never to give it up.

Andros met the legislature, and accused the matter until evening. At this point the previous charter was at last brought in, in a box, and placed on the table. Then, according to tradition, the candles were suddenly blown out, and when they were lighted the charter had disappeared.

It is said to have been hidden in a hollow oak not far off, which was ever after known as the "hollow oak." Andros, however, declared that the colony should no longer be governed under the charter, and to show that the end had been reached, he had the clerk to write "Fines" at the close of the record meeting.

When the people of Boston compelled Andros to give up the power he had abused, the charter was produced, and Connecticut maintained her government under it, not only until the Revolution, but for many years afterwards (1818).
